Morgan Stanley Investment Funds Global Convertible Bond Fund

FIXED INCOME | GLOBAL FIXED INCOME TEAM | MONTHLY COMMENTARY | 31 DECEMBER 2018

Performance Review

In the one month period ending 31 December 2018, the Fund's I shares returned -2.28% (net of fees)¹, while the benchmark returned -2.43%.

Stocks were down virtually across the board with five equity sectors down over 8% in the month and only six names out of 130 in the Fund providing a positive return.

Market Review

Global convertibles performed in between falling stocks and rising bonds in December. The MSCI World Index of global equities had the second materially negative month in the past three months, falling 7.60% in December. The Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate Corporate Index rose 1.24% while the Thomson Reuters Convertible Global Focus (USD Hedged) Index fell 2.43%. In a very weak quarter, convertibles provided helpful equity protection, with the convertibles index falling 4.74%, compared to -13.42% in the global equities index.

Portfolio Activity

In the month, we performed detailed reviews of the financials, real estate and health care sectors, and made several portfolio adjustments. We were busy trading in a volatile market, again selling out of busted names which now have little equity upside such as Prysmian, Telefonica and Tohoku Power, and rotating into more balanced names after the recent equity market correction, such as Adidas, Marriott Vacations and FTI Consulting.

Strategy and Outlook

For the year, convertibles had the biggest outperformance versus stocks since 2008, falling 3.01% versus -8.71% for MSCI global equities. This outperformance occurred due to two main factors. First, the technology and health care sectors were among the top three performing sectors (behind utilities), where both are highly represented in the convertibles market at around 30% combined weight. Second, the return of equity volatility is typically a sign of convertibles outperformance versus stocks due to the hybrid structure of the asset class. Supply was the highest since 2014 at $84 billion and notably nearly half was represented by new issuers who were attracted to the market by factors such as tax incentives, rising rates and the ability to monetize higher equity volatility through rising option valuations. Net supply was broadly flat as new issues were offset by maturities. In terms of fund flows, U.S. funds raised assets while European funds had net redemptions. Finally, we note that U.S. convertibles are lower delta (a convertible bond's sensitivity to price changes in the underlying stock) at year end than at the start of the year, giving good upside potential to any equity recovery.

Share Class I Risk and Reward Profile

The risk and reward category shown is based on historic data.

- Historic figures are only a guide and may not be a reliable indicator of what may happen in the future.
- As such this category may change in the future.
- The higher the category, the greater the potential reward, but also the greater the risk of losing the investment. Category 1 does not indicate a risk free investment.
- The fund is in this category because it invests in fixed income securities which convert into company shares and the fund's simulated and/or realised return has experienced medium rises and falls historically.
- The fund may be impacted by movements in the exchange rates between the fund's currency and the currencies of the fund's investments.

This rating does not take into account other risk factors which should be considered before investing, these include:

- The value of bonds are likely to decrease if interest rates rise and vice versa.
- The value of financial derivative instruments are highly sensitive and may result in losses in excess of the amount invested by the Sub-Fund.

- Issuers may not be able to repay their debts, if this happens the value of your investment will decrease. This risk is higher where the fund invests in a bond with a lower credit rating.
- The fund relies on other parties to fulfill certain services, investments or transactions. If these parties become insolvent, it may expose the fund to financial loss.
- There may be an insufficient number of buyers or sellers which may affect the funds ability to buy or sell securities.
- There are increased risks of investing in emerging markets as political, legal and operational systems may be less developed than in developed markets.
- Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future results. Returns may increase or decrease as a result of currency fluctuations. The value of investments and the income from them can go down as well as up and investors may lose all or a substantial portion of his or her investment.
- The value of the investments and the income from them will vary and there can be no assurance that the Fund will achieve its investment objectives.
- Investments may be in a variety of currencies and therefore changes in rates of exchange between currencies may cause the value of investments to decrease or increase. Furthermore, the value of investments may be adversely affected by fluctuations in exchange rates between the investor's reference currency and the base currency of the investments.

Please refer to the Prospectus for full risk disclosures. All data as of 31 December 2018 and subject to change daily.
